Tonight's class is a follow up to EmpowerU's visit to the border on June 26. Othall Brand, businessman and lifelong resident of McAllen, Texas will be speaking at EmpowerU on what it is like to live on the border today and what it was like in the past. It is said that every state is now a border state, but living in the Midwest we don't routinely pull dead bodies out of the river, and we don't carry a gun when we go to work. In Ohio it doesn't feel like a border state, but it is coming--fast. Find out what you need to know. American's for Prosperity (AFP) will be joining us at this class to discuss.

Tuesday, October 3, 7:00-8:30 PM

Voices haunt the pages of every book. 'War Against the Weak' author Edwin Black speaks for the never-born, for those whose questions have never been heard—for those who never existed. Throughout the first six decades of the twentieth century, hundreds of thousands of Americans and untold numbers of others were not permitted to continue their families by reproducing. Selected because of their ancestry, national origin, race, or religion, they were forcibly sterilized. In America, this battle of "eugenics" was often prosecuted by esteemed professors, elite universities, industrialists and governmental officials. The purpose--create a superior Nordic race. 'War Against the Weak' is the gripping chronicle documenting how American corporate philanthropies launched a nation campaign of ethnic cleansing in the United States.
